Dot Workman and Susan Bradley (Parents)

They are cousins and friends since they were children. These two women are both dedicated moms and advocates for children with disabilities. Of the 11 children between them they have adopted 6 with disabilities. They support each other in advocating for their children in the educational system, as well as other service delivery systems, and have gone on to mentor others in advocacy techniques. They educate community service providers in Lewis County and have sacrificed countless hours of time and energy in changing a rural school system to meet the needs of children with disabilities. They understand it benefits every child in the community.
